County's federal funds total $607 million

Pine Cone
Washington Bureau

Monterey County received more than $607 million in federal outlays in fiscal 1975 — predictably more than two-thirds of that came from Defense Department spending.

Of the $423 million Defense spent, more than $250 million was used to pay military personnel stationed at installations located in the county, according to a report from the Community Services Administration.

The civilian payroll for the fiscal year reached $55.7 million, according to CSA.

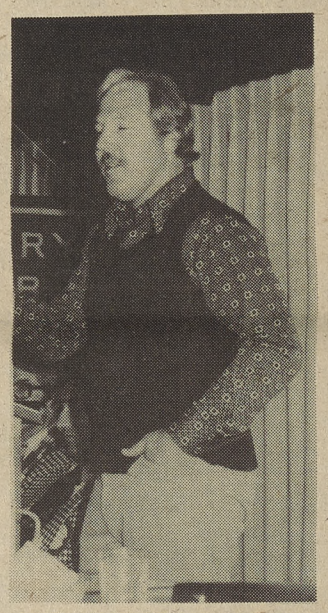
More than $47 million in military supply, service, construction and research and development contracts was authorized by the department, the report shows. CSA figures also determine $36.7 million was paid out to retired military personnel.

Outlays from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare totaled $106 million, according to the report. More than $40 million of the HEW outlay went to county residents in Social Security retirement insurance.

Social Security survivors insurance and Medicare hospital insurance cost HEW $12.7 million and $11.2 million, respectively.

Veterans Administration outlays to the county totaled $15 million, according to CSA. More than $6.9 million was spent on veterans readjustment training and $3.3 million was paid out for veterans disability compensation.

Overall, California ranked second among states receiving federal funds, gathering $36.78 billion of the $326.7 billion the government spent in fiscal 1975.



BOB HUFFORD, Middle School principal, explains that the donation he accepted will be used to replace tennis nets at the school's courts.

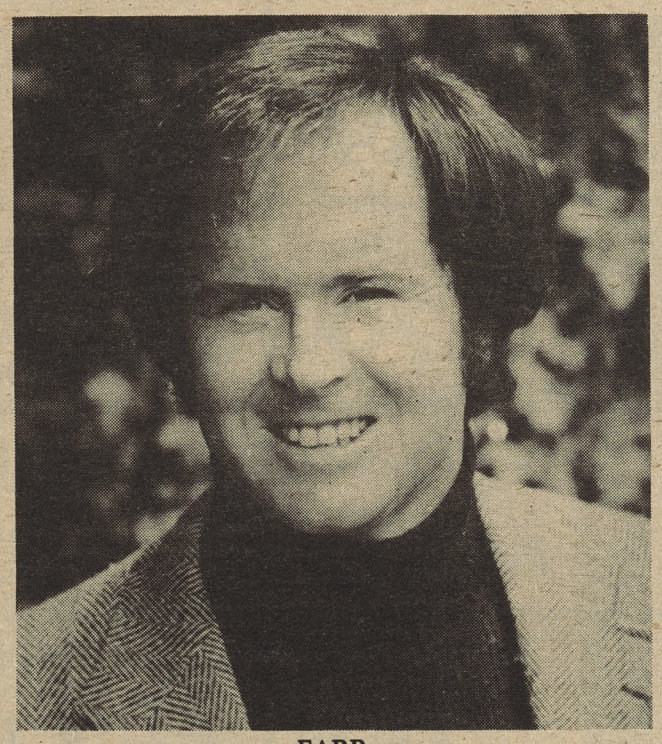
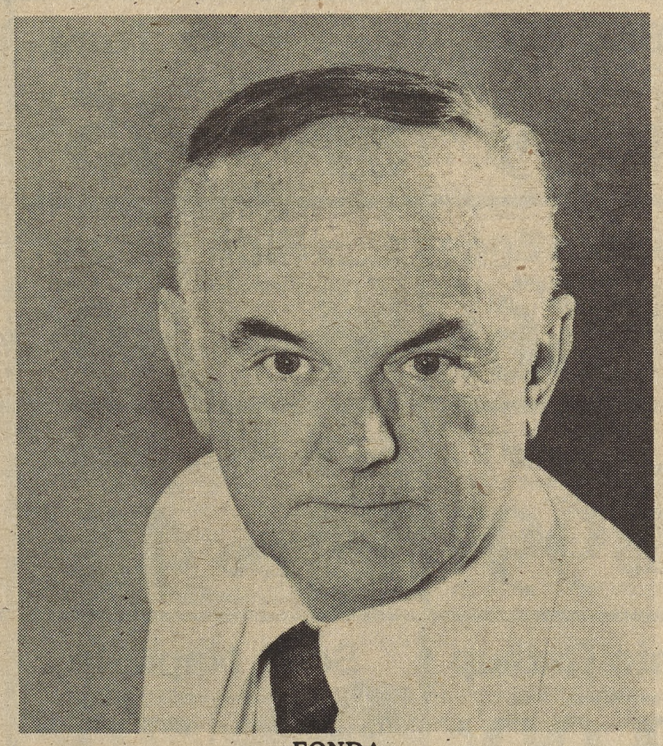
5th District race

Farr, Fonda present different perspectives



FARR



FONDA

Sam Farr also views the race for supervisor as one in which the voters have a definite choice, but he would like to see more emphasis on county issues, rather than state issues, that the Board of Supervisors can not act on legally.

For instance, he sees the Coastal Plan and Proposition 15 as vital issues to Californians but he says they are emotional ones. Personally, he favors the Coastal Plan and sees it as an opportunity for local citizens to participate in land use decisions affecting the coast.

Farr prefers to work with issues that are closer to home. He cites the Big Sur Pilot Study as an excellent example of citizen planning. The study's goal is to devise a master plan for the Big Sur area which would comply with the standards set by the coastal commissioners. The study group has been meeting each Monday night and has recently completed a series of town hall meetings collecting citizen opinions.

Farr, who was instrumental in obtaining the funds for the study, says this is an example of a taxpayer's group bringing their collective knowledge to the problems. He points out that through this method, the people are the government. And to him, there could be no better way to have representation than this.

Farr would like to see people have a better understanding of local government and how it works. With this knowledge and understanding, he thinks that people would learn what the tools of local government are and how best to use them. Farr finds that a good way to learn this is through the citizen committee.

At present, Farr has asked for a public hearing to try to establish a committee to work on the growth situation in Monterey county. He hopes to see this committee determine the carrying capacity of the area. Subjects such as how long we should have growth in the area, the complex water situation and road use and capacity should be answered by this committee. Ideally a formula for growth can be established that would be consistent with our financial and physical means, said Farr.

Farr defines the role of supervisor as three-fold. These are administrative, overseeing the county budget; legislative, through writing of county ordinances and quasi-judicial by making decisions involving land use and zoning permits.

Having a good knowledge of these three elements is crucial to being a good supervisor, according to Farr. He feels he earned these qualifications when he worked in Sacramento. There in addition to working for the State's legislative analyst, A. Alan Post, Farr worked for five years as the chief consultant to the State Legislature's Constitutional Amendments Committee.

"There I learned the framework of California government," says Farr who noted that he was responsible for initiating and adopting numerous constitutional reforms.

And he hopes to bring some of this reform spirit to county government. Farr points out his revision of the tax assessment system in the county. Under this system, he says it will be doubtful if the county will ever go for seven years without a major assessment, as is the situation now. Data will be collected and computerized.

A regular physical reappraisal will be made by the assessor to correct errors. In addition, the assessment notice has been redesigned into a letter format. With the elimination of legal terms, the form will be easier to interpret and understand, says Farr.

After a great deal of study and investigation, Farr found the county assessment practices in agreement with state laws. "But this doesn't solve our problem, which is a heavy reliance on property taxes," said Farr, pointing out that 272 units of government rely on these taxes. He hopes to see the county move away from this heavy reliance and feels it can be done through programed budgeting.

New priorities need to be provided for county services in Farr's opinion. He would like to see more emphasis on building people, rather than building buildings. This could be done by putting more money into social services. He gave examples of such organizations as Meals on Wheels, Volunteers in Action, and Friends Outside, as some he would like to see receive more support.

Farr hopes to see a revision of the county health delivery systems and has proposed a county-wide health plan. He is not against investigating dividing the county along economic lines. At present he has initiated a program to restudy the Carmel Valley Master Plan. He is in the process of establishing an advisory committee, and he hopes to model the plan after the Big Sur Study Plan.

But if Farr has one main belief, it is his belief that the county government be accountable to its constituents. He thinks that it is wrong for government to assume it knows what is best for the people. Though government should provide leadership and direction, it must be responsive to the consensus of public decision, says Farr. This can be done through hearing and forums, which will give the people a working understanding of their government.

"If people know what is possible from local government, they won't be misled by flowery statements and promises that cannot be filled at the local level," said Farr.

People input would move the board out of bureauocratic management, according to Farr. "With better understanding, people can define policies, see where the money is coming from and how it is spent," said Farr. This is what he hopes to achieve as supervisor. He said, "With people input, we can take government back to the people. We can say here are our tools and here are our limits, what would you like us to do?"

If voters want a clear cut choice, they'll have it in the 5th Supervisorial race, according to candidate Willard Fonda.

"We're different in every way," he said as he listed his and opponenet Sam Farr's differences in age, background, philosophies and political affiliation.

Their stand on the issues are 180 degrees apart. But more than that, they differ on what these issues actually are.

People are asking about the Coastal Plan, Proposition 15 and local government representation said Fonda. He said these are the questions that the people feel are the issues.

And he feels that people should have an answer to these questions. Fonda feels that each candidate's stand on the issues of the Coastal Plan and Proposition 15 is a key to the type of programs he would support as a supervisor.

He sees the Coastal Plan as an invasion of privacy, and a giving away of rights. Rights, according to Fonda, that we would never get back, once they are given away. Fonda said, "It's only at the local level of government that a system of local representation works." And, he favors keeping the land use decisions in the control of local people, rather than centralizing them in Sacramento. He says this local decision process would be given away if the Coastal Plan were to go into effect.

"People want their property rights protected," said Fonda, pointing out a recent example he had seen of this in Big Sur Pilot Study meetings. He said that the Big Sur area could be described as a liberal area. "But when it comes to property rights, they are conservative," said Fonda.

Fonda doubts the whole pilot study. He feels it's wasted money. He points out that not only does the Coastal plan not exist yet; but if coastal commissioners do not feel the plan provides the degree of environmental protection set by them, they will not accept it.

Though he feels Proposition 15 is difficult to understand, Fonda says no new agency need be created to oversee nuclear development. He admits there have been some problems in this development but feels that they have been taken care of. "This is my opinion," he said, "people will have to make their own decision."

With his background of administration and management, Fonda feels he will be able to improve the efficiency of county government, thereby reducing funds spent in running the county.

"My management plan is a simple one, as any good plan is," Fonda said. He suggests that the board meet an additional day each week. This meeting would not be for the review of new business but for an examination of direction and efficiency of each county department.

"This would put the department heads before the public," said Fonda who feels the plan would increase departmental efficiency to some extent just because of this accountability. He pointed out that it would also help the supervisors see departments that aren't needed or could be combined with other departments.

"I don't want to see the Board of Supervisors kept at arm's length. It should be involved in management decisions," said Fonda who believes there should be more of a business approach to operating the county.

He also favors an intelligent appraisal of the area. Fonda feels that this would not automatically mean higher taxes. If the tax money is sufficient now, says Fonda, a reduction in the tax rate may be in order. He does think that taxes will increase; but he feels that it should and could be a reasonable increase.

Fonda sees no growth and uncontrolled growth as forms of death. He would like to see the growth in the area compliment what exists, not destroy it. He does admit this is easy to say and hard to do.

"I believe in citizen committees but I don't believe in an over dedicated ecology approach," Fonda said, pointing out that an extreme view gives rise to extreme views at the other end of the spectrum. He does feel that concerned citizens should work on county planning and land use.

If elected he plans to have a steering committee which would meet informally, perhaps monthly. These citizens would represent all the various areas of the 5th District. By discussing the various issues, area by area, Fonda feels this group, or steering committee, would give him a better picture of what the people he represents want.

Until he's made a complete study of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, Fonda has no exact opinion on it. His general feeling is that the residential planning is well done but that the commercial planning is premature. He added that it does distress him that the plan will have to conform to standards set forth by the Coastal Commission.

Fonda would like to see a good county health care plan, more return on tax dollars, perhaps in the way of better county services in hospital care, and he would like to see more local advertising for county jobs. He said the county almost invariably hires from other county governments and that this is causing county government to be ingrown. "It seems we're (Monterey County) more interested in hiring those that know the ropes of county government than those that have the qualifications," Fonda said.

Though Fonda sees no easy solution to the water situation, he feels the county must accept the fact that it's going to cost more for water in order for more water to be brought here. How the water will be brought will be a difficult thing to work out, he says.

Fonda is proud of Monterey County as it is and can see no purpose in dividing it along economic lines. He sees no reason why the beauty in the recreational areas and the outstanding agricultural areas cannot compliment each other.

Generally, Fonda views the government as the final step of citizens working together.

CARMEL VALLEY ANSWERING SERVICE

ART DUNN
OWNER-MANAGER

chamber chatter

By JEANELLE KAMINSKE

Our new Chamber of Commerce office is located in the Oak Building, with the Carmel Valley Business Services office. In the near future we will have our signs up so that visitors can find us, and a bulletin board inside to hold all kinds of news and brochures for newcomers, old-timers and tourists. If you have a business or a service anywhere in Carmel Valley, please drop your cards and-or brochures at the Chamber office for distribution to inquirers. If you've lived here for umpteen years, drop by and be pleasantly surprised by the new businesses and services available in the Valley. (Did you know that calculators and custom-made quilts are made in the Village?)

The Chamber is sponsoring a Beautification Contest for Valley businesses. Pick up your entry blank at the Chamber office, fill it out and return it to the Chamber, the Bank of America, or to Strathmeyer Real Estate. Prizes will be awarded in the following categories: Landscaping, interior improvements, structural improvements, and vacant lot clean-up.

Mark Saturday, June 19, on your calendar as Valley Beautification Day. On that day the Chamber invites everyone to join in a community effort to cut weeds, haul away trash, plant flowers and shrubs, and we will top it off the the presentation of awards to the contest winners and a steak barbecue the following Friday sponsored by the Chamber.

Randy Randazzo, owner of Carmel Valley Market, is the Valley Beautification chairman, and a worker like Randy deserves our support. Look around and make note of what you can do to clean and brighten a spot. Do you have a mailbox beside the road that would look better with some geraniums blooming around its base? Sherrie Coakley at the Valley Lodge will offer free cuttings about 10 a.m. on Beuatification Day, for all who wish to plant them. A pail of water poured on them when you get your mail will reward you and all who pass by with constant blossoms. Can you imagine how Carmel Valley would look with flowers at 3,000 mailboxes!... (The mailman says, "Please plant just behind the post so his wheels won't hit the flowers.")

For businesses, there are fuchsias, ferns, petunias and geraniums which do well in hanging pots and planter areas that can do a lot to enhance the appearance of offices and shopping areas.

Window displays are suggested as interior improvements.

Environmental enhancements include painting outside, scrubbing and cleaning, weeding vacant lots and along the road.

We've gotta get moving to catch up with Bill Browder at Valley Take-Out and Jerry Aldridge at the General Store, who have already planted and spruced up their areas.

DONALD THOMAS, Carmel High senior, will perform "Concertante" by C. Grundman on alto saxophone at the annual spring band concert Thursday, May 27 at 8 p.m. in the music hall at Monterey Peninsula College. Admission is free.

Quilt show set

The first quilt show ever held in Pacific Grove is scheduled for Friday, June 4 and Saturday June 5 at the Chautauqua Hall in Pacific Grove.

The show hours will be 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on June 4 and 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on June 5th. Over 60 quilts will be featured.

Visitors interested in learning the art of patchwork, applique and quilting can attend the demonstrations given at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. daily.

The quilts, which are being loaned by quilt-lovers throughout the Peninsula, will be indentified as to design and originator. Hostesses will be on hand to discuss the finer aspects of specific quilts as well as to answer general questions about quilting. Some quilts will be offered for sale.

Admission will be $2 for adults and senior citizens will be given a 50 cent discount. Children under 10 will not be admitted.

The Heritage Society of Pacific Grove, sponsor of the show, is dedicated to the preservation of old buildings in Pacific Grove and to researching the history of the city.

Mrs. John Riordan will be installed as president for her second term with her new slate of officers. Past presidents will be honored.

Randall Reinstedt, author, will speak on "Ghosts, Bandits and Legends of Monterey." Mr. Reinstedt has also written "God in the Santa Lucias" and "Shipwrecks and Sea Monsters of California's Central Coast". His most recent book will provide information for his talk. A fourth book of local interest will be published this summer.

A souvenir, in the Bicentennial theme, will be presented to each member attending, according to Mrs. Norman Bundgard, program chairman.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by contacting Mrs. Paul Anthony, Mrs. Leslie Biggins, Mrs. Richard Dick or Mrs. Joseph Baudouin.

Chairman of the affair will be Mrs. R.F. O'Hartnett, assisted by Mrs. W.S. Francis and Mrs. James Thompson.

New CMS Officers

Mrs. Dale (Gail) Buche has been elected to serve the Carmel Middle School Parent Club as president for the 1976-77 school year. In her projected plans for the coming term, Mrs. Buche stressed parent involvement in the educational system and urges ideas and suggestions be sent to her or to any of the other new board members who include: Ann Gilsenan, vice-president; Ginny Auger, secretary; Sue Lloyd, treasurer; Lou Langley, hospitality; Jolene Fenton, membership and volunteers; and Linda Bradley, publicity.

Lutheran Church Represented

Representatives from Carmel Valley's St. Philip's Lutheran Church last week at the annual regional convention of the American Lutheran Church were the Rev. Walter J. Vrudny as advisory-member and Mrs. Lowell Battcher as lay delegate.

The convention held in Fresno was attended by approximately 850 clergy and lay delegates from the South Pacific District, representing about 300 congregations of California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Hawaii, New Mexico, and western Texas.

RSVP Resident Honored

Justifiably proud of a fellow resident are members of RSVP who are giving the celebrity treatment to Mrs. Pat Amerio, "MS Mother of the Year" for the Greater Monterey Bay Area Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

An MS patient for three years, this courageous mother of children 10, 9, and 4, has "inspired hope and courage in our community through her own wonderful courage and positive outlook", said Robert B. Hammond, chairman of the local board.

Ballet Fantasque to perform Friday

Ballet Fantasque of the Monterey Peninsula and the San Francisco Dance Spectrum will present an all new program on May 28, at Carmel's Sunset Theatre.

The Spring Ballet Festival opens with an original number, "The Will" — a comedy ballet set in the 1800s in Italy, written and choreographed by Kira Ivanovsky, the director of Ballet Fantasque. Other works include: "An Audition in Paris" — a slapstick ballet which takes place in the 1920s and involves various characters who are trying out for a night club act, also an Ivanovsky original, "Tai Chi T'u," "Fandango" and "Shadows" round out the program.

The San Francisco Dance Spectrum, under the direction of Carlos Carvajal, will present four works: "Textures," "Green," "Oracle of the Branch" and for the finale the comedy number "Hurrah."

The Ballet Fantasque, a relatively new company, was formed in the later part of 1973 and gave its debut performance in April of 1974. The members of the company are all professionals having performed in ballets in larger cities of the United States.

Gloria Elber (nee Lewis) a native Montereyan studied with both Dorothy Dean and Kira Ivanovsky, and was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Civic Ballet Co. She has been in many ballets and today teaches and is with the Institute of the Arts at the Hidden Valley Music Seminar in Carmel Valley.

Linda Creamer took her training with the Washington School of Ballet and the McLean Art Center in Virginia. Before moving to the Peninsula 10 years ago, she was a member of the Regional Ballet Co. of McLean. She now teaches ballet in Carmel.

Patricia Norman trained with some of the top ballet masters in the profession: Harriet DeRea, Michel Panareff, Luisa Triana all of Hollywood, and Leon Daniellan of New York. She was with the San Francisco Ballet; Greek Theatre, Hollywood; soloist with the Pacific Ballet Theatre in Los Angeles and with Radio City Music Hall in New York, and with Oleg Briansky Saratoga Ballet in New York. She has appeared in many films such as "My Fair Lady," "The Music Man," and "Bye Bye Birdie." Before moving to the Peninsula four years ago she was a member of the Modern Dance Co. of Santa Barbara.

Travis Selmier has been involved in every aspect of the theatre since he was five years old, mostly in the mid-West: Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana. He has held positions such as designer, director, producer, choreographer and actor. He has been connected with live theatre, movies and television. Before coming to the Peninsula he was for six years the general manager of the Clowes Memorial Hall in Indianapolis.

Milou Ivanovsky, the youngest member of the company, has studied ballet with her mother Kira from a very young age. For the past three summers she studied under ballet master Vilzak who is with the San Francisco Ballet Company. She has performed in San Francisco on many occasions.

ROBERT LUPETTI will be presenting a five-part series on art to be held every Wednesday evening in June at 8 p.m. in the Chapman Room, Sunset Center.

Joe Regelski

Highway 1 folk are the luckiest people in the world. Having lived through the industrial dullness of Philadelphia and its Middle Atlantic Coast environs before making it to Monterey a few years ago, let me just remind all my regular readers that there is a reason we will be jammed to the rafters with visitors starting this holiday weekend - we happen to live in the most beautiful part of the United States.

To Peninsula visitors who plan to head south after enjoying Carmel and vicinity, let me make the following travel suggestion. Take Highway 1 as opposed to 101. Enjoy the beautiful Central Coast and then take Route 46 just after Cambria and prepare yourself for the most breathtaking farmland you have ever seen. I passed that way last weekend on a return trip from Santa Barbara and believe me — Mother Nature has prepared for your coming.

AND ALL THAT JAZZ: This weekend's best deal has to be the Sixth Annual High School Band Competition for the upcoming Monterey Jazz Festival. Jimmy Lyons has even provided for a free concert on Saturday evening at MPC at 7 p.m. featuring the fine jazz men that will judge the weekend festivities. If the names Ralph Humphrey, Pat Williams, Ray Drummond, Mundell Lowe, Ashley Alexander, Benny Golson and Bobby Shew whet your musical appetities, head over to the College for a great holiday treat ..... Circle Star Theatre has a fine lineup of Downbeat award winners coming to their stage on June 11-13. How about Grover Washington, Jr., Stanley Turrentine and Freddie Hubbard on the same bill? Well worth the jaunt to San Carlos, I think ..... The Captain's Cove Restaurant on Cannery Row is featuring the fine jazz vocalist Len Dixon Thursday through Saturday evenings from 8:30 till 1. Dixon, who has paid his dues on the Nevada circuit, is a Berkeley native who first started at the Hungry i in the days of the Smothers Brothers and Phyllis Diller.

He's backed by Jeff Boyns on piano and bassist Bob Barr. There isn't a smoother act in town ..... Monterey now has two jazz jams on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Dixon is at the Cove from 3 to 7 and the Barrel House in downtown Monterey draws some of the town's best musicians from 2 to 6.

Carmel author Rosemary Rogers continues to take the publishing world by storm. Her fourth novel, "Wicked Loving Lies", is due in paperback in October but it will also be the featured selection of the Doubleday Book Club in September. Are you ready for the latest figures on her first three works? "Sweet Savage Love" now has 1,896,000 copies in print; "The Wildest Heart" 1,401,000 copies and "Dark Fires" has 2,224,000 copies in circulation.

Vicki and Paul, currently headlining the Holiday Inn Monterey, finished their first recording session at Supersound Studios in Monterey on Monday night. Two songs are now in the can and more studio work will take place in San Diego in about two weeks after their local gig is completed .... Carmel resident Chesley Bonestell was honored recently in the 50th anniversary edition of "Amazing Science Fiction" with a story devoted to his illustrative work in the sci-fi genre. Bonestell, who worked on many George Pal efforts as well as the immortal "Day The Earth Stood Still", is quoted by Amazin' as saying "Once having seen it, you must draw or paint so that others can see it. Not the thing itself, but the way it seems, that is art."

Bad news...well, disappointing news. Got a postcard yesterday from Vic and Speedie Farr, Carmel Valley's galloping great grandparents. A week ago they left here to be camp followers all summer for the transcontinental horse race. With contestant Joyce Low of Wasco a former Peninsula resident, they started east in a Winnebago towing Joyce's horses to the starting line on the Eastern Seaboard.

The postcard was mailed in Columbia, Missouri. "That's all she wrote!" penned Vic Farr. While Joyce was driving the motorhome a passing truck-and-trailer rig had set the horse trailer to fishtailing. It flipped off the road pulling the Winnebago with it. Nobody hurt. The horses were banged up, however, and the vet said, "No race."

What a lot of dreams, plans and hard work went pphhhtt! at that moment.

Joyce and Johnny Low have been putting miles on their Arabian horses for many months. They made the big ETI annual Death Valley ride last November. They didn't trailer their horses to the starting point of the five day ride at Ridgecrest. They started out five days earlier and rode them over.

Following that grueling ten day ride, they trailered down to Arizona for a 100 mile endurance race there. They've kept up that kind of schedule right up to a couple of weeks ago when they rode in the "Mission to Ocean" 50 mile endurance ride down at San Antonio.

Their horses were ready for the world's longest horse race. They were hard, strong, fit. They were experienced. They weren't spooky of strange places. They could sleep in strange beds. They didn't mind the taste of strange drinking water. All the problems that horses get had been worked out. Their gear fit. Their legs and feet were made of iron. Their hearts and lungs were acclimated to high altitude or low.

They had overcome the psychological problems of being horses much as Joyce and Johnnie Low had surpassed the problem of being only human. As every sportsman knows, there is an invisible barrier, a threshold, which must be crossed. Heroism is then not so surprising as it is a simple consequence of being totally committed.

Total commitment is what the organizer of the transcontinental horse race was looking for when he bought a double page ad in Western Horsemen two years ago asking riders to put up $500 apieace to enter. Commitment is not as rare a quality in America as you might think.

History easily shows that the strength and character of a culture or civilization is not determined by who rules.

Herb Sherman

From vacation to permanent home

By LESLIE JOHNSON

Like many other, Herb Sherman first came to the area on a vacation, but he decided to make the move after a great deal of thought.

"When I left New York to come out here, it was the middle of an ice storm, 20 degrees below zero, absolutely miserable," Sherman says the story begins.

"When I landed in San Francisco, it was 70 degrees. The sky was blue, the streets were clean and you could breathe the air," he continues. The jaunt to San Francisco led to a side-trip to the Monterey Peninsula, where he says he "naturally" fell in love with the area.

Sherman was from Inglewood, N.J., owner of two record stores. Among other activities, he was chairman of the board of adjustment. Politically active, he began to question the necessity of every activity being political.

Ultimately, he decided to make the move because in Inglewood, "The people were failing as people."

Sherman is one of many who make the move and then discover ways to finance their life something of an afterthought. "I knew what I had done before and wanted to do something different and better. If I failed, I could always go back to Inglewood, N.J., and run a couple of record shops," he says.

"I took a beating when I sold my shops in New Jersey, but I was willing to do that just to get back to the Peninsula," he said.

Sherman discovered Carmel Valley something by accident. Although he had sent a detailed list of questions to one of the chambers of commerce, he received a standard mailing that included a brochure about the rural atmosphere and style of life Valleyites enjoy.

It was that style of life that assured Sherman he had made the right decision six years ago to move here, and he is working to keep Carmel Valley Carmel Valley.

Treasurer for the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, Sherman says he is against "anything that would change the character of the Valley."

Because his idea of the character of the Valley may differ from someone else's, he continues, he believes a review of the master plan for the area is important and contact with all cross sections of the community vital.

"There are certain facts we know that will limit what can be done in this Valley. We know there is only so much water. People who buy land must be aware of this and realize at the time of purchase that buying the land deos not necessarily mean they will have the right to develop it," Sherman says.

Beyond the facts of air and water pollution, traffic safety and similar issues, the will of the people must be determined, he believes.

In preparing a new master plan, Sherman says, one way of finding out what the people really want is to draw great public participation in the process itself, especially with direct contact with the county decision makers who will rule on any new plan.

"I don't want some staff representative here so I can tell him and he can tell the decision-makers. Anytime you do that, you put a corner in a process that should be a straight line," Sherman says.

The master plan review will take a long time and involve many people, Sherman says, and should reflect what the people really want. But one way to assure the views of the public are respected, a formal, but non-binding vote might be taken, he suggests.

"We could develop three plans, perhaps. One representing no-growth another for limited growth, and a third for maximum growth, then let the people decide," Sherman says.

Sherman says the Carmel Valley Ranch proposal represents a major change in the character of the Valley, and therefore he opposes it on fundamental grounds.

"I wouldn't necessarily be opposed to a project that provided low-cost public housing, although that's not a very popular idea in the Valley," he says.

"But people have to realize that we're not going to be able to put a gate at the mouth of the Valley and demand to see credit cards and require everyone to be a member of the DAR," Sherman says.

Sherman finds the Valley an area with sharply defined political sides, although positions are determined more on issues than on party lines.

Personally, he is involving himself less these days than when he was in Inglewood. "I decided I wasn't going to do the same things I had done before, that I was going to do every thing on a first time basis," he says.

All in all, Sherman believes he has found his niche. He hasn't gone back east on vacation, and has no plans to. "It just doesn't interest (him) anymore."

Where else in the world would he like to try? "Maybe Tahiti."

Cypress swims to victory

The Cypress Swim Club once again swept every event in the 15-17 age group, winning first place gold medals in figures, solos, duets and teams at the 1976 Pacific AAU Junior Olympic Synchronized Swimming Championships this weekend and last at Castro Valley

In the figures competition, held last weekend, Gerri Brandly won first place and Kathryn Blevens fourth. Brandly went on to win the gold medal in the final solo event this past Saturday, three points ahead of Suzanne Camercon of Walnut Creek. Karen Callaghan, also of Walnut Creek, edged Cypress's Kathryn Blevens to fourth by 1.3 points. In this event, Tina Wald was 13th and Robin Currier 15th.

In the 15-17 duet event, the gold medals were won by Kathryn Blevens and Robin Currier, .4 points ahead of teammates Gerri Brandly and Tina Wald, who won the silver, and three points ahead of Jan Hall and Lesli Schremp of Walnut Creek.

The Cypress foursome then joined to swim away with the gold medals in the team finals, 10 points ahead of the Flying Fins of Hayward. Laura Steinmetz was the alternate swimmer for the Cypress 15-17 team.

In the 13-14 age group, the Cypress team of Mary Harris, Suzy Hermanson, Stacey Hicks, Robin Pease, Kerry Wald, and Pavia Wald won the fourth place ribbons. Kerry and Pavia also won fourth place in the duet competition, while Mary Harris and Stacey Hicks placed eighth. And, in solo competition, Pavia won seventh place edging Santa Clara's Kathy Kish out of the final cutoff.

In the 11-12 finals, held Sunday, Suzy Hermanson of Cypress won fifth place in solos, then paired with Eunice LaMica to win sixth in the 11-12 duets. Suzy, who had "swum up" to the 13-14 age group Team, was then finished, but Miss LaMica joined teammates Kris Ege, Sarah Hicks, Jennifer McNamara, Anne Mulvihill, and Adrienne Wald, with Jennie Powell as alternate, to win the sixth place ribbons in the team competition. Also on Sunday, in the 10-and-under events, Jane Wells won sixth place in solos for Cypress, then joined teammates Julie Ege, Lisa Friedman, Tone Grinde, Lisa Husby, Brenda LaMica, and Holly Pease, with Jodi Richter as alternate, to win the fourth place ribbons. The victories for the Cypress 10-and-unders, however, were not without heartbreak. In solo routine competition, Jane Wells actually placed fourth, but with her score from preliminary figures competition the previous weekend added in, she finished sixth overall. Also, in team competition, the Cypress 10-and-unders overcame the handicap of having placed fifth in figures competition by placing third in routines, but then suffered a Referee's 1-point penalty which dropped them into fourth.

The Pacific AAU Junior Olympics was the qualifying meet for entry into the AAU Region XIII Junior Olympic Championships. Only the top three placements in each event, in each age group, qualify for the Regional Junior Olympic Championships to be held at Santa Clara's International Swim Center on June 19-20.

Jesus called the peasants of Palestine "the salt of the earth." The backbone of middle England was the strength of her yeomanry. America was built by horsemen, Millard Fillmore notwithstanding.

The maximum number of entries was received for the great Bicentennial race which is to start next week in New York and finish on the West Coast on Labor Day. Each rider is allowed two horses both of whom have to make hoofprints all across America...that is, he rides one and leads one. Nobody makes the race in a horse trailer. Nor is the rider to substitute a fresh horse anywhere along the line.

The race is not just a grim do or die for speed. The rider with his horses has a specified number of miles to do each day and then he rests. The race winner will be determined at the end by adding up the time scores for all the race days. Also there are rest days interspersed all along the route where a footsore horse can lie around all day with his hooves in the air.

But just getting the horse and the heart and the equipment and the whole act together doesn't make it. A back up team is needed to set up camp each night, to tuck the tired rider into bed, and to wash out a few socks... things like that. Also horses don't eat just hay. They eat money. The whole summer long undertaking is likely to be expensive.

Yes, it's a dreadful disappointment to Joyce and Johnnie Low tc be out of the race before they started. It's a disappointment to their back up team Vic and Speedie Farr. But isn't it comforting in this Bicentennial year to know such spirit still exists in our 200-year-old country?

When you feel the country is bent on pulling itself down by the bootstraps, think of the horse race. Government collusion with private interest...think of someone with saddlesores rolling out at dawn to mount up again. Idiots who want to build nuclear plants in spite of the poison and plutonium because the construction would provide jobs (safer and saner to create jobs by appointing public snipers ... give each would-be construction worker a high powered rifle and turn him loose to kill the innocent. That would save many lives in this generation and for thousands of generations to come.) But think of riders half turned in their saddles to see how the horse they're leading is making it through the snow over the Rocky Mountains. Now, that's sanity. Totally sane.

Heroin addicts, Moonies, and people who believe Rotary Club orators...would they feel the same after crossing the continent on horseback? ...How's your grip on reality?.. Tighter than the childproof cap on your Cope pills?...If Money talks and you think you hear it, listen for hoofbeats...thlot, thlot...hoofbeats coming at you...coming west...Listen!
